

Each year as you grow older, you become more responsible for yourself. Preparing for education after high school is no exception and requires some action on your part.

If you want to go to college, it's up to you to make an appointment with your counselor to discuss your options and ask questions.

Ask Your School Counselor

Your counselor has information about how to plan, prepare and pay for education after high school. All you have to do is ask.

Not sure how to get started? Try asking your counselor some of these questions.

- Do you have any information about careers that would match my skills and talents?
- What classes will I have to take in high school in order to graduate and be ready for college?
- How can I be sure I stay on track so I don't miss any required courses?
- What will I need to do to make it into the Honor Society in high school, and how will that help me?
- Are there any committees, groups or other activities I can volunteer for that would help me prepare for college?
- Are there scholarship websites or resources I can start to explore now?
- Do you know of any after-school or evening college planning events that I can attend with my parents?
- Where have other kids from this school gone to college?
